10 YEARS OF IMPACT
INCLUSIVE ECONOMIES. VIBRANT COMMUNITIES.
Ten years ago, I stood at a podium at Automation Alley and shared the results of a first-of-its-kind research project. The “Global Detroit Study” revealed the many contributions immigrants make in Southeast Michigan as drivers of economic growth and recommended 11 initiatives that would, through immigrant inclusion, help us build a more prosperous region. Today, I am proud to say nearly all of those initiatives have not only been implemented but are flourishing: Welcoming Michigan, ProsperUS Detroit, the City of Detroit Office of Immigrant Affairs, the Global Talent Retention Initiative and others, with Global Detroit serving as a driving force to transform these ideas into new programs, organizations and policies.

Global Detroit has gone on to produce a significant body of groundbreaking research, and launch innovative programs in the areas of talent retention, immigrant entrepreneurship, neighborhood revitalization, and building inclusive institutions. With the support of many partners, our city, region and state are widely recognized as national leaders in building an immigrant-inclusive economy. But our work is far from finished. As we enter our second decade, Global Detroit is laser-focused on how we institutionalize inclusion in meaningful and sustainable ways.

I am immensely pleased to share this survey of Global Detroit’s first decade of impact. While we have advanced most of the ideas in our original strategy document, our work has been amplified by many partners in the public, corporate and nonprofit sectors. Collectively, we have advanced immigrant inclusion in amazing ways. I look forward to the next decade and beyond, and to building a Detroit and Southeast Michigan that is vibrant, equitable and prosperous — for all.

Sincerely,

Steve Tobocman
Executive Director

John Austin and Britany Affolter-Caine publish “The Vital Center” with the Brookings Institution, highlighting the economic importance of the Great Lakes region and citing the region’s high-skilled immigrant talent base.

11 local, regional and national funders form the New Economy Initiative (NEI) to help southeast Michigan attain a position of leadership in the new global economy in order to increase prosperity for all residents and communities in the region. Austin is named inaugural director.

NEI joins with the Detroit Regional Chamber and Skillman Foundation to commission former state representative Steve Tobocman to conduct a study of the economic impact of immigrants in Southeast Michigan.

Steve assembles a study advisory board and research team to conduct hundreds of hours of research, meetings, conversations and best-practice visits — including a scan of other Rust Belt initiatives — to determine the impact of immigrants on Southeast Michigan’s economy and identify opportunities.

The “Global Detroit Study” is released providing extensive data on the economic impact of immigrants in Southeast Michigan and recommending 11 initiatives to achieve four overarching strategies.

“There has been a void in the data available about immigrant economic development. Data collection and delivering it in an accessible format has been a forte of Global Detroit.”

— BELLOWETHER SURVEY INTERVIEW
The “Global Detroit Study” recommended 11 initiatives to achieve four overarching strategies:

- Make the region welcoming to the international community and immigrants
- Attract international investment and businesses that create jobs
- Strengthen, grow and revitalize neighborhoods in Detroit and the region’s core communities
- Attract and retain international talent, including international students, to the region

Global Detroit study interviewees included academics, business leaders, ethnic chambers, organizational labor, African American business and community leaders, hospitals, universities, economic development agencies, foreign consulates and immigration service providers.

This extensive interview and public input process formed the basis of the Welcome Mat, a comprehensive inventory of services and resources to help new immigrants learn about and being to feel at home in Southeast Michigan. First launched in 2010 as a printed guide, the Welcome Mat was later expanded into an online platform with the support of ACCESS and the International Institute of Metropolitan Detroit.

- Welcoming Michigan becomes the first Global Detroit strategy to be launched at the Michigan Immigrant Rights Center with support from Welcoming America and the Ford Foundation. GLOBAL DETROIT STUDY INITIATIVE

ProsperUS Detroit

Recognizing the need for better entrepreneurship services for Detroit’s immigrant entrepreneurs and the vital role small businesses play in strengthening neighborhoods, Global Detroit surveyed small business support programs across the US for best practices. Ultimately, we partnered with St. Paul’s Neighborhood Development Center and Southwest Economic Solutions to launch ProsperUS, an entrepreneurial training, technical assistance, small business lending and neighborhood development initiative for Detroit residents, particularly those who are immigrants and people of color. Approximately 1200 immigrant entrepreneurs and entrepreneurs of color have completed the ProsperUS program, which has helped launch more than 300 small businesses in neighborhoods. Additionally, ProsperUS has approved over $2 million in flexible, relationship-based loans to over 90 small businesses — 24% of its loans are made to immigrants, and about 90% are made to entrepreneurs of color.
By 2013, however, several like-minded organizations had launched across the Rust Belt. These initiatives represented a departure from immigrant rights and social services programs. They were led by mainstream institutions — chambers, mayors offices, economic development agencies — and embraced immigrant economic inclusion as a strategy for regional growth and prosperity.

In recognition of this, Global Detroit organized the first-ever Welcoming Economies Convening, held in Detroit and attended by 125 participants and 11 organizations. Growing out of that convening, and a second in Pittsburgh the following year, Global Detroit helped lead the creation of the Welcoming Economies (WE) Global Network. At the same time, Welcoming America was leading the growth of local immigrant welcoming programs. The WE Global Network is a program of Welcoming America, run in partnership with Global Detroit, and has grown into an 11-state collaborative of more than 25 peer immigrant economic development initiatives across the Rust Belt. Over the past year, Welcoming America made the Welcoming Economies program a national endeavor, continuing its relationship with Global Detroit as a technical expert.

City of Detroit Office of Immigrant Affairs

Global Detroit worked with Mayor Mike Duggan’s Office to establish this office to help immigrants integrate into Detroit and promote economic development within immigrant communities across the city. In its first two years, OIA wrote a refugee resettlement plan that more than doubled the number of refugees resettled in Detroit, and worked with the Detroit City Council Immigration Task Force to create a Municipal ID card and Language Access Plan.

GLOBAL DETROIT IMPACT REPORT

Our program model center on three guiding ideals: 1) We’re going to listen to the communities we serve and draw our work from them 2) this work must be inclusive of all neighborhood residents and 3) our initiatives must have neighborhood partnership.

We spent months canvassing and engaging and listening to residents, business owners and nonprofit leaders in Southwest Detroit to learn about their priorities. Based on what we heard, our work in Southwest Detroit has focused largely on helping neighborhood residents become homeowners through rehabbing vacant housing, preventing tax foreclosure, as well as connecting small businesses to resources.

To date, we have helped facilitate the sale of more than 50 vacant homes to community members.

In 2015, we were invited by community groups into Banglatown and worked with residents and business owners there to develop a “Banglatown Vision + Action Plan.” The plan detailed the many strengths and assets of the neighborhood and detailed a community vision for its future.

Through our work in Banglatown, we were invited to partner with the East Davison Village Community Group. East Davison Village is a largely African American neighborhood bordering Banglatown, where Yemeni and Bangladeshi families are starting to purchase homes. We’ve worked with EDVCG on their plans to form a nonprofit and transform a vacant house into a community hub. With our support, the group received its nonprofit designation in June 2020.

As our Opportunity Neighborhoods and Small Business Support work evolves, Global Detroit continues to deepen our role as a “trusted connector,” helping families and small businesses access resources and opportunities to help them put down roots and thrive.

OPPORTUNITY NEIGHBORHOODS

What kind of work could we develop that helps immigrant families and business owners thrive in Detroit and that helps strengthen Detroit neighborhoods, but that doesn’t replicate traditional community development programs? That is the fundamental question behind Global Detroit’s Opportunity Neighborhoods program.
We're home to 22 Welcoming Communities, the most in the US.

Detroit was named a Top 10 welcoming city for immigrants in New American Economy's Cities Index (2018 and 2020).

Industry groups and chambers statewide have signed the Michigan Compact for Immigration.

Global EIR helps international founders launch high-growth startups in SE Michigan.

Between 2013-2017, Detroit’s immigrant population grew 8%.

Both Michigan and Detroit have offices devoted to immigrant affairs.

Global Talent Retention Initiative has connected more than 4,000 international students with more than 100 SE Michigan employers.

ProsperUS has helped more than 300 small businesses open, most owned by immigrant and minority entrepreneurs.

The Office of Global Michigan’s Michigan International Talent Solutions has helped make our state a national leader in skilled immigrant integration programs.

Global Detroit begins working with the East Davison Village Community Group, securing a MSHDA home repair grant and supporting efforts to form a nonprofit and create a neighborhood hub.

Global Detroit launches Champions for Growth, signed by more than 350 business leaders pledging their support for a strong, open, inclusive and welcoming federal immigration system.

Global Detroit works with the University of Michigan Ford School of Public Policy to release “The Economic Impact of Refugees in Southeast Michigan,” conservatively estimating the total annual economic impact of refugees to be between $229.6 million and $295.3 million in new spending, along with between 1,798 and 2,311 new jobs, in 2016 alone.

GLOBAL DETROIT STUDY INITIATIVE
Welcoming Michigan

In partnership with Welcoming America and the Michigan Immigrant Rights Center, Global Detroit helped launch this initiative to make Michigan a more welcoming state to immigrants. Since 2011, 22 Michigan localities have declared themselves a Welcoming City, County or Township, making Michigan the leading state with the largest number of welcoming communities in America. These communities support locally driven efforts to create more immigrant-friendly environments. In 2020, MIRC asked Global Detroit to assume leadership of Welcoming Michigan as it refocuses its work on law and policy.

SUPPORTING SMALL BUSINESSES

When NEIdeas announced its annual small business funding competition, Rezaul Karim didn’t think the opportunity was right for him. But a member of Global Detroit’s outreach staff in Hamtramck/Banglatown, convinced the owner of Everyday Super Discounts to apply.

The result? Rezaul was an NEIdeas $10,000 winner. He leveraged his award to secure a bank loan and purchased a building where he has tripled in size.

Between 2015-2018, Global Detroit provided more than 1,200 small businesses with information on NEIdeas and supported more than 200 applications in Southwest Detroit, Banglatown, East Davison Village and Hamtramck. Of these, 57 small businesses were finalists and 10 were winners, bringing $100,000 in new funding to small businesses owners and into these neighborhoods.

While NEIdeas has ended, we continue to work as a trusted connector for immigrant-owned businesses across Detroit, most recently connecting business owners to information on PPP, TechTown’s Small Business Stabilization Fund and other critical resources during the COVID-19 pandemic.

Global Detroit also works corridor-wide. We partnered with the Bangladeshi American Public Affairs Committee (BAPAC) and others to expand the Banglatown identity and establish the neighborhood as a destination. And we have begun work with Bangladeshi, Yemeni, Polish and African American business owners in Hamtramck/Banglatown to develop a business association. While those plans were put on hold due to COVID-19, we’ve been able to leverage this burgeoning network to quickly deploy information and provide assistance throughout the pandemic.

“Global Detroit is certainly increasing awareness and raising visibility of the work.”
— BELLWETHER SURVEY INTERVIEW
Over the past decade, Global Detroit has advanced communications strategies that helped put data-driven, fact-based messages and ideas about immigrant-inclusive economic development on local, regional, state and national agendas.

We have been quoted in more than 180 articles, published 32 op-eds and participated in more than 200 panel discussions and speaking engagements. Select national media outlets include The Atlantic, The Economist, the Washington Post and The Wall Street Journal. We have given keynote addresses, led workshops or served on panels for, among others, Business Forward, CEOs for Cities, Forward Cities, Migration Policy Institute, the Immigration Law and Policy Conference at Georgetown University Law Center and the White House Regional Convening on New Americans.

100% of key influencers interviewed noted that Global Detroit was the primary voice or one of a few voices leading on the issue of economic development through immigrant inclusion.

In late 2018, Ashok Seetharam and Ilya Preston founded PAXAFE in Milwaukee. The company develops hardware and software IoT solutions that enable cheaper, intelligent shipping insurance.

A native of India, Ashok was permitted to remain in the U.S. and continue developing PAXAFE for a short time following his graduation from Brown University, but he needed a new visa to stay and develop his company. Fortunately, in late 2018 Global Detroit partnered with a national nonprofit, Global EIR, to launch the program in Southeast Michigan. Global EIR places foreign-born startup founders at universities to teach and mentor. By working at a university, Global EIRs are able to legally work in the US. This affords them the opportunity to launch their startups here and apply for a concurrent H-1B through their company. Global Detroit’s first Global EIR university partner was the University of Michigan. Ashok was accepted to the U-M program, and PAXAFE moved their headquarters from Milwaukee to Ann Arbor. In late 2019, the company closed on a $650,000 round of pre-seed funding, bringing their total raised that year to almost $1 million. Working out of Ann Arbor SPARK, they have begun piloting their product and hiring for new positions. In 2020, Global Detroit and Wayne State University launched a second Global EIR program in Southeast Michigan. Across both programs, we expect to have six Global EIRs in the region by the end of 2020.

“Global Detroit is a trusted thought leader. They provide a consistent, accurate and data-based narrative and framing for the ways that immigrants are good for economic development.”
